WARM UP AMERICA Connie Berman

Dear Yarn-workers, Warm-Up America regulars, and those of you who just might like to try it out : We are feeling stressed. Between High Holidays and my trip to Paris in mid-month, it's going to be complicated to get the many afghans promised to Habitat for Humanity houses in their hands at the right moments, but that is probably achievable. There is also a larger problem.

We have developed a peculiar bottle neck in our production. Squares are made, afghans are laid out in beautiful patterns, and then they dismally wait to be chosen and taken home by someone to sew them together. This is very distressing for those beautiful 7 by 9 inch acrylic blocks. They are desperate to be put together with their adjoining blocks. They want to move onto getting edges and labels and then out into the community to create joy. Instead, they feel ignored and crowded on our shelves. Alas. Please help them out. Please help them fly. They will thank you. We'll be meeting twice in October -- on Sunday the 6th and Sunday the 27th, ten to noon. Usually we're in the social hall -- and if the door is locked come around to the back window. Please come and try it out. Maybe if everyone sewed together just one strip of seven while we are together, the problem can be solved. You can help.

Best wishes for the new year,
Connie, Fred George, and the stressed blocks

FROM THE PRESIDENT

Sue Weinberg

Shana Tova! I wish you all a very sweet new year, and if you will be fasting on Yom Kippur, an easy fast.

As I write this, the holidays are approaching. On a personal level, I have cleaned my house, baked honeycake (for the first time!), and am looking forward to enjoying the holidays with friends and family.

Looking to the wider world of the congregation, I want to thank the Ritual committee for all the work that they have put in organizing the services; this was more of a challenge than in the past as our beloved rabbi is still on maternity leave. I also want to thank Sisterhood for organizing babysitting and the Not Just Honeycake Rosh Hashanah oneg, contributing the lovely flowers, and (new this year), donating funds to Hillel to cover transportation costs (Uber/Lyft) for students to attend services at the synagogue. The social committee has organized a delicious Rosh Hashanah lunch, catered by Oasis, and will be organizing the best-tasting meal of the year—the Yom Kippur break-fast! My thanks also go to the Safety Committee for their work to keep us safe. And thank you to all who are helping with the services in any way, including a warm welcome to Rabbi Gilboa, and welcome back to Emily Schoerning, Anax, Fia, and Hannah, and Jerry Sorokin.

I would like to draw to your attention to an event that is happening on the Sunday between Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur. On Sunday October 6, the Tikun Olam committee is sponsoring a blood drive at the synagogue. Be a life-saver - If you are able to donate, please consider signing up. If you are unable for whatever reason, recruit a friend or two to donate!

I encourage everyone to reach out to myself, the board, or the office if you have questions or concerns, or just to introduce yourself, I would be happy to meet you and go out for coffee (tea in my case) just to say Hi!

Warmest wishes for a happy, healthy, and sweet new year.

SCHOOL NEWS

The kids came back to school with a rush of energy. It was wonderful to hear about their summer adventures and to see how much they have grown!

They found some familiar faces, several new teachers, and a little more Hebrew in the Sunday curriculum.

Knowing some Hebrew vocabulary is important as the foundation to learning prayers and preparing for bar or bat mitzvah. But it is also a kind of magic key to participating in Jewish life, learning Jewish history, and understanding the Torah. We are bringing Hebrew into Sunday School in a couple of ways.

Sunday School

First, we are introducing Jewish (Hebrew and sometimes Yiddish) vocabulary into ordinary speech. For instance, we say lehitraot ("see ya later") at the end of the day, warn students not to larutz (to run) in the halls. My hope is that these words will become part of the culture of the school. Maybe the kids will even bring these words home and start using them there.

We have also been using Hebrew Through Movement as a "brain break." Kids follow their teachers' commands to run, walk, sit, and point at various objects. Once they have a basic set of verbs, they can use these verbs to learn nouns. For instance, they might point to the Sefer Torah (Torah Scroll), or sit in a kiseh (chair) to learn the brachot that we say over nerot candles on Hanukah.

In addition, the younger kids (Kindergarten through Second Grade) study one letter each week along with some vocabulary. So far they have studied the letters reish (R) for rosh (head) or Rosh Hashanah and shin (Sh) for shofar and shannah (year). They have twisted themselves into pretzels to make these letters with their bodies, colored them, and found these letters in their own names.

Andy Frank returned to the school for his very popular Shofar Blowing Workshop. All of the kids got a chance to try blow the shofar. Some got very red in the face but only produced a squeak. Others blew a pretty credible tekiah (blast). Everyone had a great time. I would like to thank Andy for his great generosity in doing this workshop every year. It has become an Agudas Achim High Holiday tradition that the kids really look forward to.

Knowing some Hebrew vocabulary is important as the foundation to learning prayers and preparing for bar or bat mitzvah. But it is also a kind of magic key to participating in Jewish life, learning Jewish history, and understanding the Torah.

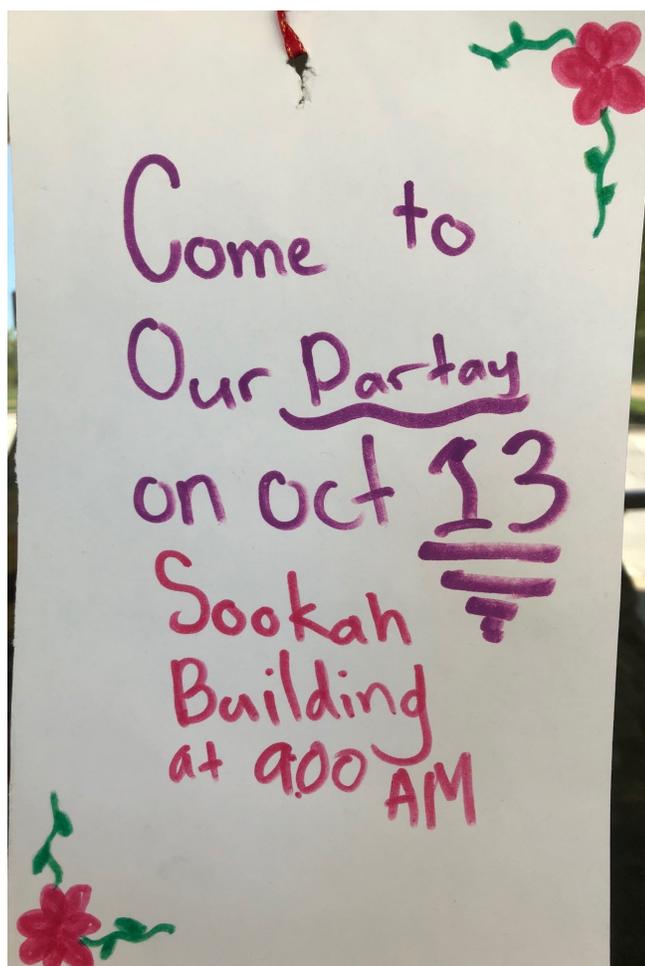

If Rosh Hashanah is approaching, that means that Sukkot is right around the corner! Every year, the school decorates the synagogue sukkah. This year, I have vowed "no soggy sukkah," so I have provided only waterproof materials. The Second/Third Grade is taking the lead on decorating, although I am sure other classes will pitch in. Since their decorations are sometimes a little abstract, I have asked them to provide little cards explaining how their decorations relate to the holiday. So far, I have seen a lot of sparkles, some glow-in-the-dark paint, and many carefully printed Hebrew words.

Please support their efforts by coming to the Sukkah Build on Sunday, October 13 at 9:30 a.m.! (If you come at 10:00, right after dropping your kids off at Sunday School, that will also be great.) If many hands make light work, we can have the sukkah up and ready to decorate by 11:30.

The Sixth Grade is organizing the school's Sukkot celebration on October 20th from 12:00-1:00. Parents, look for an invitation to a Sukkot lunch soon. The Sixth Grade is creating a tzedah project appropriate to the holiday, planning a menu, and learning about the deeper meaning of receiving guests. Meanwhile, the Fourth/Fifth Grade is preparing to teach everyone the blessing for sitting in the sukkah and the proper way to shake a lulav. They are free to use any teaching method they chose. Rumor has it that they have chosen to do a skit.

Also on Sundays, we have started a supplementary Hebrew program that engages in Hebrew Through Movement to build vocabulary. Since this program is intended for kids nine and up, we move through the Hebrew faster than we do with the little kids. In addition we study one prayer a week. This program is intended to offer some Hebrew to students who miss weekday Hebrew School, for whatever reason.

It really cannot replace Hebrew School, however, since it offers many fewer hours of exposure and far less time to delve into the meaning of prayers. So far, the students at this Hebrew session have practiced singing V'Shamru ("The Children of Israel will Keep the Sabbath"), which is sung before Kiddush over the wine on Saturday afternoon. They sang with great gusto.

Hebrew School

Meanwhile, in Hebrew School, the students are making their own siddur (prayerbook). One each page, they paste the prayer they are studying, add notes about vocabulary and pronunciation, insights about meaning, and reminders about when to stand, bow, or sit. They will use this siddur during the school's short service and to help them prepare for bar/bat mitzvah.

The siddurim will not go home because I do not want the students to lose them. But I have promised the students that their parents will visit the school on one of the last days of the semester to admire all of their work.

Their siddurim will start with the Torah Service, which they are studying now. If your child is in the Sixth or Seventh Grade, I will schedule a time for them to lead the Torah Service on Shabbat. It is very good practice to lead part of a service before becoming bar/bat mitzvah. Look for an email soon about a date.

Hebrew School always ends with a short service from 6:00-6:15 in which the students practice singing or leading prayers. I invite all parents to come to Hebrew School a little early so that they can join their kids in the service. Even the kids who are too cool to admit it love to see their parents there. Besides, if the whole school is on the bimah leading prayers, they need a congregation!

PIONEERS, THE FIRST BREACH by S. An-sky

To the traditional Jews of Miloslavka village, Jewish enlightenment was cultural crack cocaine: an enticing poison to be kept away at all costs.

One day toward 1900 a bedraggled Yeshiva graduate named Zalmen Izikowitz, “skinny and slight, with a small beard, a hunched back, and furtive eyes,” stepped off the stagecoach in Miloslavka. This Zalmen was no malamed, no rabbi or cantor, just a young luftmensch with a vague revolutionary daydream. From door to door he wheedled work as a freelance tutor, offering to teach young people (but mostly girls) “goyish things – Russian and writing.”

Savvy mothers knew that “goyish things” might be useful to their marriageable daughters, because the brides would soon be managing businesses while their husbands hit the books in Miloslavka’s beit midrash. Miloslavka people could tolerate Russian language and female literacy, up to a point, behind their patriarchs’ backs. But they would have gone into shock if they’d known what Zalmen hid in his battered suitcase: antireligious treatises, sentimental novels, and radical notes that he’d accumulated among a clique of rebellious Chabad boys.

“The Haskalah movement, Jewish Enlightenment, narrates An-sky, “was a remarkable period... In the rock-solid wall of ancient religious-cultural foundations, a deep crack was forming.” Zalmen himself has only a shaky grasp of Russian and philosophy, but once his cultural contraband became the focus of young people’s romantic dreams and utopian ambitions, there would be no holding back the tsunami of innovation. A first breach in the old Jewish way had been opened. The age when Judaism would balance on the knife-edge of faith and skepticism had begun.

In this short, frisky novel S. An-sky, whom we know so well as the playwright of The Dybbuk, was looking back on his own Zalmen-like youth. When he became the maturing genius of Jewish ethnographic research, he found comedy in it. Here’s Zalmen’s student Melech taking his first crack at writing a love letter: “As to your request that I start a romance with you, I will fulfill it with the greatest of pleasure, although in four months from now our wedding will take place, God willing, and none of this will any longer be necessary.”

But it’s not all comedy. An-sky’s mature judgement on what modernism meant for Jews recognizes the price we paid:

“It left multitudes – nearly an entire generation – broken and crippled in its wake. They rowed away from one shore and never reached the other. But in and of itself, the movement’s ardent idealism was beautiful: its breadth and daring were wonderful... it initiated a new civic, nationalistic way of life.”

The National Yiddish Book Center deserves applause (and donations) for bringing Pioneers back to life in its new series of translated Yiddish literature. Rose Waldman’s English rendering flows and sparkles as if the book were written yesterday. And indeed, in a way, it still is of our time.
